

With Kate's love for the woods, she thought San Diego needed trees more than anything else. So she left teaching to become a gardener. She knew she must plant trees that could live in dry soil with lots and lots of sunshine.

Her friends worried Kate wouldn't find trees like that.

But she did.

